Hospital Information

Welcome to Self Regional!

Self Regional Healthcare is a thriving independent, not-for-profit, regional medical center located in Greenwood, SC. SRH is convenient to Greenville, Columbia, and Augusta, GA.

- Self Regional Healthcare was founded by philanthropist Mr. James "Jim" Self who also founded Greenwood Mills
- He donated the $4 million hospital to the community in 1951 after a tornado destroyed the old hospital. Today that would be an approximately $52 million gift.
- SRH since expanded and is a 358-bed not-for-profit hospital with a Level 3 Trauma Center, NICU, ICU/CICU, and Robotic Surgery Program
- We have 293 physicians currently have inpatient privileges. We have approximately 52 physicians with outpatient only privileges.
- We are now also affiliated with Edgefield County Healthcare and Abbeville Area Medical Center, which are both 25 bed critical access hospitals.

Community Information & Greenwood History

Known today as the “Emerald City,” Greenwood has roots dating back to 1823, when John and Charlotte McGehee established a summer home called “Green Wood.” The community grew rapidly after the arrival of the Greenville & Columbia Railroad in 1852, and the town was officially incorporated in 1857.

Textile manufacturing, led by the opening of the Greenwood Cotton Mill in 1890, transformed the local economy and fueled growth throughout the early 20th century. In 1904 Lander University relocated to Greenwood, SC. In the 1940s the development of Lake Greenwood enhanced recreation and tourism to the community. Today this region of South Carolina is known as the Lakelands, due to the prominence of so many freshwater lakes.

Special Attractions: Flower Festival, Festival of Discovery (barbecue festival), Widest Main Street in America, Lake Greenwood, Railroad Historical Center

Today Greenwood blends historic charm with modern industry, education, and outdoor recreation. Come check us out!
